

Term 5 - Best Bits Blog

Wow! What a term it has been. Here we are with the penultimate best bits blog; we are feeling rather sad that our ECS journey is slowly coming to an end.

Although only 5 short weeks have passed us by, it has most certainly been the busiest term in Year 6 so far. Earlier in the term, we completed our End of Key Stage Assessments, which we have been working extremely hard towards all year - we now await our results in July.

In English this term, we have been reading the novel, 'Wolfbrother' by Michelle Paver. This inspired a day of survival activities where we were even given the opportunity to taste crickets, mealworms and other crunchy critters! It was a great day; another one to add to our ever-growing bank of special ECS memories.

Our 'ECS Apprentice' event began this term, with each of our teams being given their apprentice task. We are really looking forward to pitching our creative ideas to a panel of experts next term and hope to see you at our stall during the Summer Fair. Will we be fired, or hired?

As always, this term has most certainly been memorable and as we head towards our final term at ECS, we are doing our utmost to enjoy all of the time that we have left to spend together; including practising for our production of 'The Lion King' which we will be performing in late July.

We look forward to talking to you again next term, but for now, enjoy the sunshine and we will see you soon!
